FORTY ACRES OF LAND AVAILABLE FOR THE NEEDY

Yardley Friends Are Sponsoring
Community Garden Project

300 PLOTS ARE PLANNED

Ground, Seed, Help To Be Given Those Who Want To Help Selves

YARDLEY, April 8.—Forty acres of choice land, with more available if desired, have been set aside between here and Morrisville, as a community garden project for the needy of the section.

The plan as being worked out by the Yardley Friends Meeting, which group initiated the project, is to have plots measuring 50 by 100 feet. There will be laid out at first about 300 plots. If the response is good, more land will be available for additional plots.

Opportunity will be given, through free lands, seeds, and help, to all persons, who have had their incomes cut down or stopped, by the depression, to help themselves by owning a garden.

It is proposed to plow and harrow the land to be used so that only work with hand tools will be necessary. Free seeds and possibly some fertilizer will be provided for those having time and the desire to secure the joy and benefits from gardening. The assistance of qualified experts in planning and caring for the gardens has been secured from the Pennsylvania State College Extension Department. The services of a competent supervisor who will be on the ground at all times has been secured. Advice and demonstrations for the canning, drying, and storing of surplus vegetables will be a valuable part of the undertaking.

A plot of ground along the Yardley-Morrisville road above Westover has been made available. The tract contains sufficient room for three hundred garden plots, fifty by one hundred feet. By following the plans worked by the State College each garden will be big enough to raise all the seasonable vegetables for summer use and permit the growing of others for winter storage. The soil will be in a well cultivated condition when the plots are assigned and an early and successful planting will then be assured.

The County Relief Committee has secured seed packets which will be distributed to all persons now receiving state assistance. These may be used in planting the gardens. Other seeds will probably be received through the Red Cross and through private donations. Individuals may also bring their seeds. It is hoped that donations of fertilizers will help to make maximum results of the work possible.

After the applications for the gardens have been received and before the planting starts, a meeting for all the gardeners will be called, at which time the best methods of planting, fertilizing and caring for the crops will be fully explained by specialists. During the growing season other meetings on the control of pests and on preserving of surplus vegetables will be held.

The project is being initiated by Yardley Friends Meeting with the cooperation of other public spirited men and women. A committee composed of citizens of Yardley, Morrisville, and Trenton will be formed at once to guide the work. The American Friends Service Committee, with headquarters at 20 South 12th Street, Philadelphia, has for the past two years, carried out the relief program in the soft coal field of western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, as suggested by President Hoover, and the work is still going on. This organization has had, during the past 17 years, numerous successful experiences in similar work in their fields of endeavor both in America and Europe.

This committee has appointed Hans Burkhard as Community Garden Director. He will be on the grounds all during the season, helping to solve the many problems which will arise, and meeting the needs for assistance and materials. Mr. Burkhard may be addressed Yardley, Pa., R. D., or reached by telephone, Yardley 36.

Announcement will be made later of the assignment of plots.

The will which was probated in the Register of Wills' office, at Doylestown, directed that his body be interred in Ewing Cemetery, Ewing Township, N. J. To a grandson, Charles Rodman Slack, he gave his premises, 1052 Stuyvesant avenue, Trenton. Two sons, Conover and Lerol, will inherit securities, and a daughter, Lella M. ## Demand Increased For Beer On First Day of Sale

There was a brisk demand for beer in Bristol during the first day that the beverage was on sale, after 13 years of dryness.

The thirst-quenching fluid was on sale in stores, clubs and former saloons. Bartenders were kept going all day with a brisk business. During the evening the demand increased. One saloon tapped its fourth half during the evening.

A number of those who had planned to put beer on sale were prevented, due to the fact they could not obtain a supply. One brewery would not make any deliveries outside of Philadelphia until they had Philadelphia supplied.

The prevailing price here was ten cents for a twelve-ounce glass, but one proprietor cut the price and offered a seven-ounce glass for five cents.

The business was conducted very orderly.

FORCING PINCHOT'S HAND ON STATE LEGISLATION

Bills Are To Be Dumped On The Governor's Desk

TURNER BILL PIVOT

By Joseph A. Lottas
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Apr. 8.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's Republican state organization is brandishing a silent but mighty whip to force its legislative program to enactment.

Assemblymen who voted against the Turner bill have already felt the lash of what may prove to be as astute a political maneuver as Harrisburg has seen in many sessions. After 14 weeks the Legislature is about ready to dump literally hundreds of bills on Gov. Gifford Pinchot's desk.

These bills are built around No. 22, Rep. Turner's, the mainspring of the organization program. Virtually the entire financial structure of the Commonwealth for the next two years, as now devised by the Assembly, is woven about that bill.

In the strategy to force Governor Pinchot's hand on the Turner measure, every state-aided hospital in the Commonwealth is affected and the Governor's own political life is being hung in the balance.

The organization contends that Bill No. 22 effects more than $10,000,000 in state economies and by way of proving it has boosted the hospital allotments 29 per cent above the Governor's recommendations. When the whole program is piled on his desk, then, he will have the choice of accepting the Turner bill, which he has condemned, or forcing a cut in the hospital appropriations.

The fourth meeting of Sunmakers class was held Tuesday at the home of the Misses Mildred and Betty Smoyer, Bath street. Those present: Mrs. Ronze, Janet and Lois Afflerbach, Margaret Appleton, Gladys Cochran, Evelyn Force, Helen Houser, Dora Sheetz, Betty and Mildred Smoyer, Betty Sumers, Katherine Evans, Janice Jeffries, Evelyn Whitcoe, Alice Davies, Mervina McLatchie.

The deficit of $188.53 as shown will be cared for by contributions within the next few weeks.

TAXPAYERS DISCUSS PENDING LEGISLATION

Senator Buckman and Representatives Haines and Yeakel
Are Among Speakers

ADOPT A RESOLUTION

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 8.—An innovation in the way of a taxpayers' meeting was held here last night. It was an innovation in the fact that the State Senator and two Representatives were present and discussed bills of interest to the taxpayers before the Legislature at the present time.

The Committee on Resolutions submitted a resolution that was adopted asking that the Board of Commissioners of Bucks County be requested to make a downward revision of real estate assessments in Bucks County to accord with present market values, and to make such reduction in millage that the tax burden shall be materially reduced.

Senator Buckman, of Langhorne, disagreed with one of the speakers who declared that the Taxpayers Association was solidly opposed to the Pinchot 20,000-mile township highway plan, which had been described as "miserably handled."

Senator Buckman also strongly opposed the Williamson bill, which the Taxpayers Association had listed among other bills in a resolution asking the Senator to support or improve on.

"I do know that the Williamson bill is being lobbied for by the road-builders, the machinery men, the material men and the oil men of Pennsylvania," he declared.

"It is true that the road supervisors favor the bill and they are doing a good job, but don't you think those who are lobbying so strongly for it have something up their sleeve? Maybe the $10,000,000 allotment that would go to Philadelphia under this bill, may mean the sale of some road machinery or other materials for somebody."

Senator Buckman also informed the taxpayers that in his opinion the bill providing for an emergency income tax in the State and another that would limit to 4 mills the amount of tax levied for school purposes "have not a Chinaman's chance of passing."

Both had been advocated by the Taxpayers Association.

Another bill he said did not have a chance was the one that would abolish the offices of borough, town and township tax collectors.

"We cannot stop politics from being played in our townships and boroughs and for that reason the bill would never pass," the Senator contended.

Other speakers included Dr. W. Albertson Haines, of Bristol Township, and Wilson Yeakel, of Perkasie, Bucks.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL --- HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, Apr. 8.—(INS)—The older and more staid members of the General Assembly are finding to their annoyance that the playboy element is increasing with each legislative session.

The influx of new members, many of them comparative youngsters, is held responsible in great measure for the lack of cohesion and control in the House. It takes a new, and particularly a young member at least one or two sessions to learn that wisdom is the better part of valor, that he must bury the independent affluents and take orders once in a while. The penalties of irregularity are heavy.

With 206 members, nearly half of them novices, enjoying new experiences, the task of maintaining order in the House is difficult. The roll was being called one night this week on final passage of a bill. The chamber was packed. Half-way down the list,

A CONTINUING JOB

Permanent highways have not yet been laid and it is highly probable that they never will be.

The work of road building in any part of the country is not done when the covering is removed from the concrete or asphalt and the shoulders are hanked up to the pavement. It will not be long before repairs are required and changes will be deemed necessary. Roads wear out; weather conditions work heavy damage; great trucks carrying freight carloads smash and break them and pound their surfaces full of defects.

None of the roads put down, say five to 15 years ago, fully meets present-day requirements. They must be widened; new surfaces must be laid; curves must be modified; danger spots must be made safer; intersections must be improved; grade crossings must be eliminated. In many instances they must be practically rebuilt.

When road improvement was first started, little was known about building highways as we consider them at present and a great many mistakes were made, not only in the building but in their location. Hard roads were laid in unnecessary places in those years, for it was all under the direction of local officials and such a thing as a state system was not contemplated.

The result is that in every state the work of rebuilding is perhaps as extensive as new work.

And this must go on—for there will be little or no reduction in the extent of automotive traffic. We must keep mending and improving our "ways," year after year, making them better all the time.

THE CAVE MAN

The cave man always did come in for a deal of attention. It is a popular notion that he was free and magnificently brutal. But it was only recently that scientists arrived at the conclusion that he was intelligent, so intelligent that he would rate a better I. Q. than many of his supposedly more civilized descendants.

The suggestion may seem repellant, for most persons are loath to admit that in intelligence they are inferiors. But when facts are scrutinized it is found that a considerable number show the cave man to have been a superior being in many ways.

So far as we know, he did not, for one thing, indulge in, or succumb to, what moderns have named "bunk." He bought nothing from high-pressure salesmen. He conducted no moral crusades. He did not believe that clothes make the man. He pretended to no sophistication. He never got into a rut or became the slave of routine. He made war, but when he did he did not talk about abstractions. He preferred solitude to the crowd. He was never known to have made laws which he knew he could not live up to, and custom and tradition never dictated his manner of living.

The cave man accepted life on the simplest and most honest terms. Living on an earth much fiercer than it is today, he yet managed to avoid being either too glib or silly. He lived, begot children and died. In the end modern man does no more. If he was not more intelligent than modern man, at least he gave his native intelligence more freedom in dealing with life.

Artist's Conception of Akron Disaster

This dramatic sketch by Louis Biederman, celebrated artist, gives his impression of the disaster which befell the U. S. S. dirigible Akron off the coast of New Jersey. According to the theories of naval experts, the catastrophe was caused by lightning striking the big ship. Of her crew of 78 officers and men, only four have been accounted for. The other 74 are missing and feared drowned.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, young and comely fiancée of Kimberley Farrell, handsome blond youth, just out of law school, leaves her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry "Kim." Mary Faith receives a note from Kim's mother inviting her to dinner. Arriving late, due to Kim's delay, Mary Faith is greeted coolly by Mrs. Farrell. Suddenly there is a crash and scream from the kitchen and Kim calls to Mary Faith. Mrs. Farrell had knocked over a pot of coffee slightly burning herself. The unpleasant attitude of Kim's mother proves to Mary Faith that she does not favor the marriage. Driving home, Mary Faith realizes a mother's feelings in giving up her only son. Before leaving, Kim bluntly asks Mary Faith to postpone the marriage. The next morning Kim arrives early. He again startles Mary Faith by telling her he called on another girl, Janet, after leaving her the night before and asks Mary Faith to return his ring.

CHAPTER VII

It was half past nine when Mary Faith walked into the office that morning.

Jean Bartlett and the other stenographers looked up at her and smiled when she opened the door. Something in Jean's smile made Mary Faith turn a quick half-frightened glance at the door of her own little room. . . . Suppose the girls were giving her an engagement shower! A shower like the one they had given Miss O'Keefe last year just before she left to be married!

"I hope they haven't—Oh, I do hope they haven't," Mary Faith prayed silently.

But the second she opened the door she saw that the thing she feared would happen had happened. Her desk was covered with white packages tied up with satin ribbon and her glass flower vase was filled with long-stemmed bride's roses.

She stood gazing at them in agony for a second. Then she closed the door and went into Mr. Mark Nesbit's office without stopping to knock.

He was sitting at his desk, doing nothing. His letters lay in a neat stack before him. She saw that they had not been opened. She had always opened his letters for him.

"I'm sorry I'm late," she said, and then: "May I speak to you a moment?"

He nodded.

"Mr. Nesbit, yesterday afternoon I told you I was going to leave you at the end of the month. . . . I'd like to stay on if it's all right with you. I've changed my plans."

He glanced up at her.

"You mean that you're not going to be married in two weeks?" he asked sharply. So sharply that it did not occur to her at the time that this was anything but a business-like question.

"I'm not going to be married at all," she answered quietly. "I've broken my engagement."

"I see." He got up and stood beside the desk, his hands in his pockets. "Everything here goes on just as it usually does, then. . . . Well, that's fine, Mary Faith."

He never had called her Mary Faith before.

Everything had always been perfectly business-like and matter-of-fact between them. She had done his work and he had paid her salary. They had always been "Miss Fenton" and "Mr. Nesbit" to each other.

"Please send Miss Bartlett in," he said as Mary Faith turned to go out of his office. "I spoke to her just now about taking your position when you left. . . . I'll tell her you're staying on. That will save you any embarrassment."

The second she opened the door, she saw that the thing she dreaded had happened—her desk was covered with packages.

In her own little room once more Mary Faith stood looking at the white tissue-paper packages on her desk.

One of them smelled of gardenia sachet powder. The heavy scent rose to her nostrils and made her think of the little bunch of gardenias, tied with silver ribbon, that Kim had sent to her last Easter. Once again she could see the pale watery sunlight of Easter Sunday morning when she and Kim had walked, side by side, to church. Kim—There would be something to remind her of him always. . . .

She was picking up the white packages from her desk when the door of the room flew open and Jean Bartlett came in.

"What's this Mr. Nesbit's been telling me," she asked, shutting the door behind her. "You're not going to leave after all?"

Mary Faith shook her head, her face white and still above the bride's roses on her desk.

"Well, what on earth—? What's happened?" asked Jean. "Aren't you going to be married?" Her black eyes were wide with curiosity.

She was one of those frank, cheerful, talkative people who have no secrets. She told everything there was to tell about herself to anyone who would listen to her. Mary Faith knew all about her love affairs, her home life, her friends, and her bank account.

And because she had no secrets of her own, Jean had no qualms about poking her nose into other people's business. But she was lovable and loyal and amusing, and she and Mary Faith had been great friends for four years.

"No, I'm not going to be married," Mary Faith told her with lips that felt stiff although they were trembling. She looked down at the packages in her hands, and when she looked up again her eyes were shining under a film of tears.

"What happened? Did Handsome change his mind?" asked Jean, who knew Kim and frankly admitted he was the best-looking man she had ever seen.

Mary Faith nodded slowly. Then she came around the desk with the engagement presents in her hands. "These presents. . . . It was mighty nice of the girls to bring them to me," she said. "You give them back to them, Jean, please. I can't—." She shook her head, unable to go on.

Jean fairly snatched the packages from her. Then she seized the bride's roses by their long stems and shook the water from them.

"Oh, but I'd just like to tell Kim Farrell what I think of him!" she said, bristling all over. "It's too bad you haven't a father or a brother or somebody to go round and give him the best sock on the nose he ever had, Mary Faith. That's what he needs. . . . To do a think like this to you!"

She dropped the roses into the waste basket and picked up the package.

"Buck up, Mary Faith. Don't take it this way!" she went on. "Plenty of mothers have sons, you know. A girl's a fool to break her heart over one man when the world's so full of men. . . . You'll find somebody else pretty soon and in six months you'll have forgotten you ever knew Kim Farrell. I know. I've been engaged twice—and I wouldn't shed a tear over the best man alive!"

When she had gone, taking the waste basket of roses and the engagement presents with her, Mary Faith ran downstairs to the rest room where she cried bitterly as she washed the scent of gardenia sachet from her hands.

All day long as she went back and forth in the office she could feel the curious eyes of Jean and Miss Saxe and Miss Kelly upon her. She knew that they were all wondering just what had happened between herself and Kim.

And Miss Gilday, who operated the switchboard, had put through telephone calls from Kim to her every day for almost four years. . . . Miss Gilday must be wondering what had happened, too.

A Thousand Yous....

WHEN you pick up your newspaper and glance over the advertising you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, figuratively speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department of every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading groceries, banks, theatres, all the various places that supply the things that make this the twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousand yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements tell you in a few minutes morning or evening.

Advertisements deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without advertising, the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for small change would make a dollar look like a snowball on the kitchen range.

It pays to read all advertisements in this paper

NORRISTOWN—Horses may be on their way to extinction, but it took police over 18 hours to find six that galloped away from the stables of John Harris here.

Released from their shelter to exercise, the animals strayed away. They were found some distance away the following day.

DONORA—A clear reception or none. A dozen Donora men, whose sets have been acting queerly of late because of alleged broadcasting experiments of a neighbor, in organizing the Valley Amateur Radio League stressed that as their objective. "Clear the air is all we ask," a spokesman for the league said.

The Capitol Whirl

With sixty bills facing them on final passage one night this week, the House wearied of the dull procedure of calling the roll of 206 names time after time. On one bill carrying no controversial issue, the membership howled "aye" in unison to cut off the clerk who was reading the roll. Talbot expressed his regrets but insisted the rules must be observed and ordered the clerk to proceed.

Rep. Philip Sterling, Philadelphia member aligned with the administration, charged on the floor of this week that members are not paying attention during the passage of bills—and proved it.

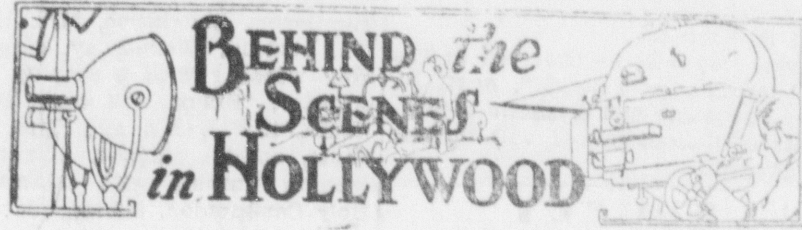

He pointed out that the Turner bill transferring all auditing work in the revenue department to the Auditor General was passed on the previous day by a vote of 194 to one. Sterling had cast the only negative vote.

He developed that this particular bill had been passed finally in error and should have appeared instead on the second reading calendar. To meet constitutional requirements, the bill was called on final passage again. Thirty-five votes were cast against it this time. The bill passed, however, with 126 votes in its favor.

A few minutes later it was discovered that the Haines bill to regulate co-operative agricultural credit associations also was passed finally in error on the previous day. The same procedure of repassing had to be followed.

Passage of House Bill No. 22, after it was voted down once, was brought about only after a number of "new deals" were made among the political leaders. One of the deals, it is reputed, will result in the death of two house bills designed to relieve local taxpayers by "robbing" tax collectors of the exorbitant fees they have been collecting and will continue to collect for themselves unless these particular bills become law.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., . . . .

Good stories for children are hard to find, but Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thinks it has an ideal vehicle for Jackie Cooper in "Buddies". The adventures of an orphan who becomes a $1,000,000 child prodigy.

A screen original by Edgar Allen Wolf and Howard Emmett Rogers, this picture starts very soon, and will bring Jackie before the camera for the first time since "Divorce in the Family."

There is a grand part in "Buddies" for Marie Dressler—the keep-er of a theatrical boarding-house who adopts the orphan—but it looks as if she will be too busy with "Dinner at Eight" and "Tug-Boat Annie" to play the role.

Since you've seen the hero of "Skippy," he's grown a bit, added numerous items to his collection of weapons, and has gone to school like any other boy. Jackie is 9 years old, will be 10 on September 15.

He is still the nice, friendly kid who brought the lump in your throat when "The Champ" lay dead and the waif cried for him to come back.

A swell story goes the rounds about one of the studio fashion designers.

Some time back he lectured before a group of women. After he had finished, a very stout matron bustled up to him.

"I heard your speech," she gushed, "but won't you give me a little personal advice. What colors should I wear?"

The designer tried to get away, but she pinned him down. Finally he said: "Madam, God colored the butterfly in red and yellow and the elephant in gray."

With which he walked away.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

Past disputes all forgotten, Janet Gaynor has signed a new contract with the Fox studio. It means she will stay there for at least a year and there is an option on another twelve months. It was four years ago that the tiny star first signed with the company. She made a tremendous hit in "Seventh Heaven," split with the studio over later stories, came back to work and has been there ever since.

As I get it, Norma Talmadge is studying dancing to join the road company of the musical, "Flying Colors." She would take the New York part of Tamara Geva, Gladys Du Bois (she's Bob Armstrong's constant companion) has written a book of poems, "Wives Come First." They're modern verse with a disillusioned note. . . . Yesterday was the birthday of Walda Winchell (she's Walter's daughter, you know) and the youngster is that proud of her new doll carriage.

That was the party of Joan Bennett and Gene Markey in which Doug Fairbanks sat at the gold room of the Beverly Wilshire. He didn't bring a girl. . . . And Mary Brian was with Jack Oakie again. . . .

After spending several days with Sue Carol, Dixie Lee has moved to her mother's house, waiting Bing Crosby's arrival. . . . Mack Sennett was so anxious to get Richard Hemingway for a comedy lead that he had the actor fly out here from New York. . . .

And Al Boasberg is due here soon. . . . When Ann Dvorak paid her first visit to the Warner lot, she went directly to Busby Berkeley's set to renew her acquaintance with chorus girl charms of days gone by.

Ann comes back from her trip very slender and with a deep tan from the African sun. It seems that she didn't let her mother know she was coming home. Just phoned from San Pedro.

DID YOU KNOW—That Gary Grant played the lead in 12 consecutive operettas for the St. Louis Repertoire Co.?

SALAD DRESSING

AS a rule, when we think of Salad Dressing we associate it with salads. But it can be used in many other ways. As a condiment, for example, to season steaks and chops and fish.

Salad Dressing can be served in a variety of ways, and is sold at extremely low prices. It contains oil, vinegar, fresh egg yolks, salt, sugar and spices. All these ingredients are scientifically blended, so that they won't separate. It is high in food value, adds zest and tang and flatter to many a milder food, and it keeps indefinitely, because of the careful selection of its ingredients.

Let me give you a few suggestions about mixing it. If you want to dress up a nice fruit salad, mix

Salad Dressing with whipped cream. For a plain lettuce salad, there's nothing better than Russian dressing, made of Salad Dressing, mixed with chili sauce. And for vegetables, you can make a wonderful Thousand Island dressing with Salad Dressing, combined with chopped olives, pickles, or what have you.

Here is an appetizing menu that can be served at low cost: Corned beef hash; buttered beets; cabbage with hot Salad Dressing sauce; bread and butter; and jellied rhubarb. In preparing the cabbage with hot Salad Dressing sauce for six persons, you'll need two or three pounds of cabbage. Shred it coarsely, and cook it in boiling salted water for about ten minutes. Then drain. Make a white sauce of butter, flour, and milk, about half a cup of Salad Dressing, and one tablespoon of lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper. Add the sauce to the cabbage, heat thoroughly, but do not let it boil. A dish like this makes cabbage devotees of everybody.

WE MET a business man the other day who was very enthusiastic about the way the basketball league was conducted in Bristol this past winter. . . He thought that the interest shown, both by the players and the public, was an indication that this town should have a hall large enough in which the proper seating facilities and a regulation court could be installed.

This gentleman had some good ideas about getting such a place built and how with the co-operation of the proper people, the place would earn enough money to carry the cost. . . Well, we certainly would like to see such a building erected in the very near future. . . and so would a lot of the fans.

We wonder why this old town cannot get a good baseball team organized to represent us in faster company on the diamond. . . When you listen to the older citizens relate stories of the doings of some of the great clubs that traveled around the countryside beating their opponents with regularity. . . We think that a real fast team could be recruited from the players on the many letter clubs that play in the twilight league and independent ball.

We know that there are many public-spirited men in the community who could organize such a club if they were given the proper kind of encouragement.

Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Poole, Mrs. Allison read from "The Club Woman," the official publication of the federation, an article by Mrs. Poole. In this article Mrs. Poole gave some hints on membership and suggested that old books should be sent to the American Merchant Marine Library Association.

Reports of the committee chairmen were received.

Announcement was made of the Spring meeting of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs in Perkasie, April 28. The local organization will be represented at this county-wide event by Mrs. John Hart and Mrs. Paul B. Bennet.

Guest day will be observed at the next meeting on Thursday, April 20, when the music and dramatic departments of George School will furnish the program.

Taxpayers Discuss
Pending Legislation

County's Representatives in the General Assembly.

Dr. Haines described House Bill No. 22, economy and administration; abolition of bureaus and bridges; anatomical welfare and various other boards.

Dr. Haines agreed with Senator Buckman as to commitment of voting for a bill until a vote was taken.

Mr. Yeakel also spoke on several other bills stating: "We are trying to do the very best; but sometimes, all cannot be pleased."

He called attention to the fact that House Bill 1235 which would reduce taxes for schools and road purposes in the townships to four mills, could not be passed.

Before Senator Buckman sat down he stated he had introduced Senate

Bill No. 717 which he described. This bill deals with the state taking over the connecting links on the Pinchot road system. He also stated he had signed a contract at Harrisburg which will bring a new bridge into Bucks County over the Delaware from Milford, N. J., to Upper Black Eddy, at a cost of $90,000, none of which is to be paid by Bucks County. The cost is to be divided between the State of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey.

Just before the close of the meeting, Webster Achey, a Doylestown attorney rose from his seat and asked "What definite program is there at Harrisburg for reduction of state expenditures?" "If you want a real answer," said Senator Buckman, "there is none. There are too many factions up there. Many of them will not back the Governor. While he is Governor he should have the respect of all and they should go along with him instead of working against him. As long as these factions work against each other there will be no reduction in state expenditures."

Colonel G. VanOrden said the Senator had painted a very dark picture for the taxpayers of Pennsylvania and that he felt confident there is a remedy for it all and that they had just started to fight. He stated the County Association would join with the State Association of Taxpayers. "As far as we can see we have just started to fight. We should give Senator Buckman all the backing we can, and then we can expect support from Senators and Representatives when the citizens favor certain things," he said.

Can the Cubs Repeat?

By BURNLEY

THE hardest place to stay is on top, and the Chicago Cubs, pennant winners of the National League last year, are going to have their capable hands full trying to keep the bunting in the Windy City during the new race.

All hands in baseball see the National League tangle for the season as a close and hot proposition, yet all in confidence in the Cubs' fair. Cholly Grimm, who starts his first full term as the team's manager, says the Cubs will win the pennant, and so does President Bill Veeck, who maintains that an experienced pitching staff, a second-to-none outfield, a smooth-working infield and general all-around snappiness are what the Cubs have in an ultra combination. And it is true that the experts can hardly find another National League aggregation that out-classes the Cubs for steady going.

The fans will get their money's worth aplenty when the Cubs play, thanks to the acquisition of Babe Herman, the prancing outfielder, whose devastating stickwork is no mere rumor. It is no secret that the Cubs feature Herman as Joe Drawingcard on their roster, and Babe is ready and willing to earn his $18,500 salary.

The big Babe has been proving most effective in pre-season games, hammering the right field fence consistently and garnering more than a good share of safe hits. He appears contented in his new pastures, with hardly a backward glance at the Brooklyn bayous from whence he came.

The Cubs are a strong team, as this survey will suggest: On the mound, Warnecke, Bush, Root, Malone, Tinning and Grimes; in the outfield, Cuyler, Stephenson and Herman; infield, Grimm, Billy Herman, Koenig and English. And each section has a good reserve from which to draw.

Three candidates for the important office of southpaw hurler are Beryl Richmond, Carroll Yerkes and Roy Henshaw. Grimm is anxious to develop a good left-hander to take up where Jackie May left off. The Cubs paid a good price for Richmond, whom they purchased from the Baltimore Internationals, and there is talk of gold in that nugget.

The brunt of the pitching, of course, will be borne by Lon Warnecke, who set a fast pace last season and shows every promise of being ready to continue his flashing form.

Training has gone along smoothly for the Cubs, with nary an injury, and all the boys appear to be in excellent condition for the campaign. It is an experienced team that should turn in a steady, effective brand of baseball. And Mr. Babe Herman will furnish all the color anyone could desire.
